DEMOCRATS APRIL FOOLED

Lost Control of the City Government

COUNCIL REPUBLICAN

The City Voted Down the Proposition to Pay Paving Tax For Churches

Monday was indeed an April fool day for Ypsilanti democrats. Of course Ypsilanti is a republican city on a full vote, but the democrats have had the city government during the past year and controlled the council before they had the mayor and so had come to think they would continue in control. But the fight was given up long before the polls closed, in fact it was pretty certain by 1 o'clock that the republicans would elect their ticket.

O. E. Thompson the republican candidate for mayor received the substantial majority of 199, being 34 votes less than Montgomery received for justice of the supreme court and 30 less than Foster the republican candidate for commissioner of schools received.

The democrats saved two aldermen, Frank Worden in the Fourth and Wm. A. Moore in the Fifth, and Elmer McCullough supervisor in the second district. But he had no opponent, as was the case also with Damon, republican in the first district. The republicans elected aldermen in the First, Second, Third and one in the Fifth.

The vote for mayor in the respective wards was as follows:

MAYOR.

	Thompson.	Davis.
First	210	145
Second	120	81
Third	156	121
Fourth	139	58
Fifth	150	171
Total	775	576

From the above it will be seen that Thompson carried every ward but the Fifth, the home of D. L. Davis, the democratic candidate.

The vote for aldermen was as follows

WARD TICKETS.

First Ward—
Elmer Brown, R..... 236—120
N. B. Harding, D..... 116
Second ward—
J. B. Van Fossen, R..... 115— 30

Third ward—

Fourth ward—

Milo Gage, D..... 147
Short term: G. S. Davis, R.. 150
W. A. Moore, D ..... 164— 14

For supervisor in the first district Damon, republican received 618 and in the second district, McCullough, democrat, received 320.

Arms, republican, was elected constable in the second district by 41, receiving 435 votes to 394 for Ross. Arms carried the first ward by 38 and the second by 9, while Ross carried the third by 6.

Millard Fletcher, democrat, was elected constable in the second district over Geo. W. Thayer.

Ypsilanti voted not to pay the paving tax of the churches by 348 No to [illegible] Yes.

224 [illegible] court and [illegible] county school commissioner the vote co[illegible] Hoppe. [illegible] as follows: by wards [illegible]

MARCH AND THE LION.

SOMETHING BETTER THAN THE OLD SAW.

The saying about the lion and the lamb in March often proves false, but there is another and a better one which is literally true. When March comes in and finds you taking Hood's Sarsaparilla to purify, enrich and vitalize your blood, you may expect, when it goes out, that it will leave you free from that tired feeling and with none of the boils, pimples and eruptions which manifest themselves because of impure blood in the spring. If you have not already begun taking Hood's Sarsaparilla for your spring medicine, we advise you to begin today. We assure you it will make you feel better all through the coming summer.

POWER HOUSE WILL REMAIN IN YPSILANTI

D. Y. & A. A. ELECTRIC RAILWAY CO. CLOSED OPTIONS.

Plans Call for Building Just Double the Size of the Present One.

Manager Merrill informs the reporter that on Monday the D., Y. & A. A. closed deals for additional land on which it will erect its new power house for the Detroit, Ypsilanti, Ann Arbor & Jackson line. He says the plans call for a building just double the size of the present power house, and that this transformation station will be the only one on the line. Under the new system which will be installed the power will not be weakened by distance from the source. The current will be uniform and steady, which will be a great improvement over the present. Ypsilanti is to be congratulated on the fact that the new power house is to be located here. It means much to the city.

ALABAMA WARBLER TOUCHED FOR MONEY

Frank Harper, a dapper little colored man, who boasts a prominent place in the colored 400, is in the toils of the law, for he has been accused by Miss Elizabeth Perry, a member of the Alabama Warbler jubilee company, which is spending a two weeks' vacation in Ypsilanti, of stealing the sum of $95. Harper is a suave, glib-talking gentleman, and while confessing to have come into possession of the money, he relates a Baron Munchausen tale to show his lack of guilt in the transaction, which he will have the opportunity of repeating before Justice Childs Thursday morning, April 11, when he will be brought down from his present quarters at the Ann Arbor jail for examination.

Miss Perry, who is a young colored woman of good looks and an assured manner, states that on returning one night last week from Ann Arbor, where the company had given a performance, she missed a roll of bills amounting to $95, which she had been carying around with her in her stocking. She supposed that while she was dressing for her part in the performance at Ann Arbor or in walking to or from the hall the money had slipped from its resting place and been lost; so she caused an advertisement to be put in the Ann Arbor papers and brought the matter to the attention of Officer Ross, of this city. Ross learned that Frank Harper, an Ypsilanti colorel gallant, had accompanied Miss Perry to and from Ann Arbor, and a little investigation revealed the fact that shortly after the money was lost Harper had purchased new clothes, a hat, a cane, a gold watch, a cornet and numerous other articles; so yesterday Ross secured a warrant and apprehended the suspect.

A little clever cross questioning led Harper to confess that he had had the money, but he denied that he had stolen it, accounting for its being in his position by the ingenious explanation that while he, Miss Perry and the rest of the troupe were waiting for a car outside the Ann Arbor station of the D., Y. & A. A. he saw a white man pick up a roll of bills from the sidewalk, and that by putting up the bluff that he himself had just dropped the money he induced the stranger to hand it over. He didn't know the money had been lost by Miss Perry, he said, so kept it.

Miss Perry and the manager of the company, W. H. McKanlass, say that [illegible] was standing so close to them [illegible] that he during the wait for the car [illegible] could not possibly have held such colloquy with any one without their noticing and hearing it.

Miss Perry claims to have lost $95, but Harper says all he received from the stranger was $70.

Harper was told of the loss and he went with the manager to a newspaper office and waited while the latter paid for an advertisement offering a liberal percentage of the roll for its return, so he will have a hard time convincing the justice that he was unaware whose property he was spending when he purchased his new clothes, hat, cane, watch and cornet.

The young woman looks upon the case as simply another instance of man's proverbial duplicity, as she says that Harper paid her marked attentions, and was apparently very anxious for her society.

"Have you any doubts remaining?" said Mrs. Jones. "No, Marinda, I have not. I took Rocky Mountain Tea last night." 'Twill remove any impure thoughts in the human family. 35c. Ask your druggist.

THE TREND OF ENGLAND

Professor Goldwin Smith Says It Is Drifting to Autocracy.

PERILS OF A GORGEOUS COURT.

Power Is Passing, Says the Eminent Canadian, From Parliament to Crown Ministers—Conditions Which Are Imperiling British Liberty.

Professor Goldwin Smith writes his English friends from Toronto:

"Imperialism is the prevailing sentiment of the day. Its tendency to exalt the monarchy above the constitution is clear. If you have an empire, you will in one form or another have an emperor. The conversion of inflammable multitudes, especially in the metropolis, to imperialism, with its excitement and its pageants, seems to furnish the sort of basis which the Tory democracy requires.

"A revival of personal government, perhaps with a vizier as courtly as Lord North, begins to loom in view. Colonial sentiment is being cultivated to the same end. Colonists can have little interest in your domestic politics or parties. The only thing which meets their eyes and the sole object of their political attachment so far as it is concerned is the crown. They are led by politicians who look for imperial titles and rewards, while their social leaders aspire to connection with high society in London.

"Further to dazzle the eyes and work upon the feelings of your people, you will now have a gorgeous court to which will rush the new made wealth not of London only, but of New York and Chicago. Plutocracy invested with feudal titles will be more aristocratic than was the old aristocracy of birth. Older kings naturally will sympathize and, so far as lies in their power, cooperate with the exaltation of the monarchy in Britain. Especially is this to be expected from an imperial personage full of his own divinity and most rampant militarism, with whom a sort of family compact appears on foot.

"Power is passing out of the hands of members of parliament into the hands of the ministers of the crown. The triumph of the government at the last election was a triumph not only over the opposition, but over the independence of the house of commons, in which there now appears to be little power of resistance to the ministerial will. There are many ways, some direct, some indirect, in which liberty may be attacked. It may be beaten down or undermined.

"An openly avowed autocracy is a bad thing, but an openly avowed autocrat is not wholly irresponsible. If his misgovernment becomes intolerable he may lose his crown, perhaps his head. The personal government of George III was wholly irresponsible. Toward something like a renewal of this it is apparent you are now allowing yourselves to be drawn."

A WOMAN'S EXPERIMENT.

Chicago Society Dame Becomes Matron of Model Lodging House.

Mrs. M. J. R. Tyler, a member of the Chicago Woman's club and a woman of wealth, who has been prominently identified with philanthropic movements, has left her home in West Monroe street to become matron of the Woman's Model Lodging House at 253 Ewing street. Her term of service will last a year.

She had intended going soon to Florida for a long season of rest and pleasure, but the need of the lodging house, in which all the women's clubs of Chicago are interested, appealed to her, and she decided to forego her trip to try this experiment in philanthropy. She volunteered to take up her quarters at the lodging house and act as matron for three months. The directors of the institution were so pleased with the idea that they elected her for a year.

Heretofore the matrons have been hired women, with no special enthusiasm in the work, and it is said their assumption of superiority in their relations with the inmates has been distasteful to the directors and contrary to the spirit of the institution.

A Faithful Fowl.

The Philadelphia Record tells a story of a hen with one leg that was in the habit of following its mistress, a kind hearted Irish woman, wherever she went. The Irish woman died the other day, and the faithful fowl hopped on one leg alongside the funeral procession two miles to the Baptist church and dropped dead on the church steps. Some said it died of a broken heart; others thought that the great exertion of hopping so far on one leg and the small amount of food it had eaten caused the vital exhaustion. At any rate, kindly hands buried it just outside of the church fence by the roadside.

INDOOR MEET HELD SATURDAY

The Normalities turned out in full force at the gymnasium on Saturday to witness the first of the indoor meets, which it is hoped will become a permanent feature of college athletics. On account of the shortness of the college courses and the fact that the great majority of the students are girls, athletics at the Normal are at rather a low ebb, but Director Teetzel is rapidly improving the situation, and he believes that the future has in store much brighter days. But of the things he counts on to increase the interest of the college in the subject is frequent meets and contests, at which the local athletes may try their prowess against one another.

While no world's records were broken last evening, the meet may well be pronounced a success, as a good crowd was in attendance and great interest was shown in all the events. The number of men who take an active part in athletics is not particularly large in proportion to the number of men in college, but Teetzel's persistent efforts to liven things up and develop competition is having a steady effect, and if his policy can be carried out for two or three years more the school will reap the reward in the way of more first prizes at the Intercollegiate, and a better standing for the teams.

The program last evening was opened with a "potato race," participated in by Steinle, King and Smith in one bunch and Jennings and McClelland in another. Steinle, King and Jennings came together for the final, and victory fell to Steinle.

Edmunds, Squires, Ireland and Partch held a lengthy contest over the high jump, Ireland finally winning out with a jump of 5 feet.

Wolf showed himself the king of the crustaceans by defeating successively Mason and Bellenger at the noble sport known as the "crab pull," which is a game in which two men lie flat on their stomachs with a leather halter about three feet in diameter about their necks, and then pull in opposite directions, the one who moves his opponent being hailed the victor.

The rope climbing was participated in by Steinle, Smith and Jennings, and was won by Steinle, he climbing from the floor to the ceiling in 6 2-5 seconds, while Smith took 9 1-5 seconds and Jennings 10 seconds.

Three wrestling bouts were put on, and all proved short and fierce. Rogner threw Crook in 27 seconds, Gillespie settled Bellinger in 45 seconds, and Wolf demolished Jones in 38 seconds.

The pole-vault was won by Whitcomb with a pretty vault of a clean nine feet. Edmunds dropped out at 8 ft. 6 inches, as he is a heavy man and feared that the pole being used was too light for him. The other contestants were Gill and Wolf.

Edmunds won the 12-pound shot-put by a throw of 39 ft. 2 in., with Van Devanter second with 36 ft. 7 in., and Mason third with 35 ft. 11 in.

Whitcomb and Kimbal gave an exhibition of some very fine bar work. Both are unusually good for amateurs and both are great favorites with the students. Their work last evening was especially to their credit as they have outdone anything in that line for the entire year.

The meet was closed by a 20-yard dash and a relay race between two teams of seven each. The contestants in the 20-yard dash were Scovill, Bennett and Smith in one lot, Edmunds, Steinle and Jennings in another, and Wolf, King, McClellan and Dennis in the third. Bennett, Edmunds and Wolf came together for the final, and Edmunds won, the time being 1 2-5 seconds.

The relay teams were: North—Wolf, Rogner, Smith, Squires, McClellan, Edmunds and Bennett. South—Scovill, Bellinger, Steinle, Partch, Dennis, Jennings and King. The south team won by a narrow margin.

Howard Hayes, the captain of the U. of M. track team, assisted in keeping time and refereeing.

CAPT. ALLEN KNEW FUNSTON'S FATHER

Ex-Congressman E. P. Allen says he knows the father of Gen. Fred Funston very well—was in congress with him two terms and served with him on the agricultural committee in the 51st congress. Funston was chairman of the committee on agriculture and Capt. Allen was chairman of the sub-committee of that committee by appointment of Chairman Funston. He thinks Funston senior was a member of congress for eight years. At one time a brother of Capt. Allen was the opposition candidate for congress in Funston's district in Kansas, and came near defeating him.

The now famous Gen. Funston was then a young man about 24 yars of age and used to come about the committee room frequently. Capt. Allen says the General comes honestly by his fighting qualities and his courage. Congressman Funston, he says, was a heavy-set man of low stature, with a large head and high forehead, a wide, heavy jaw, a man of deep convictions and so absolutely sure he was right that he was ready to fight for his convictions at any time. He was a Puritan in religious views and all other traits. A good man with all, but a little inclined to be a radical partisan because of his before mentioned traits. He was a genuine farmer and made a good chairman of the agricultural committee. His hair was red as is hisson's, but was rapidly turning grey. The General could not be his father's son, says Capt. Allen, without being pugnacious and a good fighter.

YPSILANTIANS WILL INVEST

A company is forming in which a number of Ypsilanti financial people are interested for the purpose of purchasing 87,000 acres of land in Cuba. This land is said to have a number of the most valuable woods of commerce in large quantities upon it, among them being mahogany and ebony. Col. Harrah, who was in Cuba with the 31st Michigan, is promoting the scheme and had a meeting Friday night with Ypislanti people. Among those here who are interested in the project are N. B. Harding, Fred W. Green, Don C. Bachelder, D. C. Griffen, Mayor H. R. Scovill, O. A. Ainsworth, Tom McAndrew and Marshal Cremer. Some of these gentlemen, possibly Fred W. Green and D. C. Bachelder, will make a trip to Cuba in the interest of the proposed company very soon. Col. Harrah expects to go there next Tuesday, it is said, in the interest of the proposed purchase. This tract of land comes down to the water on a part of its boundary. It is said to be fine land for the growing of orange trees and that it will produce fruit bearing trees in four years. It is also claimed the timber on it will pay for it several times over as it can be purchased at fifty cents an acre.

FATHER RETAINS THE DAUGHTER

Says a Lansing special:

"The supreme court has denied the application of Anna P. Doyle, formerly Wrisley, of Kalamazoo, for a writ of habeas corpus to gain possession of her daughter, Gladys Wrisley, who she claimed had been taken away by her former husband, Frank Wrisley. The singular feature presented by the case was that both husband and wife had secured divorces in different counties of the state, and each was awarded the custody and care of their child. The wife's decree was granted in Kalamazoo, the husband's in Charlevoix. A question of which court had jurisdiction was involved. The court here held that the Charlevoix court had jurisdiction and that the decree obtained by the husband giving him the care of the child must be obeyed. "Should he not be the proper person to have the care, custody and education of the child?" I ist held "that question can be determined in another proceeding."

Ypsilanti is conrned in the case to the extent that the little girl, Gladys, has been for some time living in the city with her grandmother, Mrs. Wrisley, of Summit street, and that some months ago the mother came to Ypsilanti and enticed the little one from church, returning her, however, before the end of the day to the frightened grandmother.

Frank Wrisley and his wife lived together at Charlevoix for several years, but finally as the result of domestic differences, the wife left home suddenly, taking the child, Gladys, with her. Wrisley obtained possession of the little one soon, and since then the mother has been doing her utmost to get the child back again, but so far without success.

Both obtained divorces and were granted the custody of Gladys, but the father has been able to keep her in his possession.

DOES CREDIT TO DIRECTOR MAYBEE

"It shows what conscientious work, backed by a good preparation, can accomplish," remarked one of the crowd returning from the annual high school concert in the high school hall Thursday evening, of Director Harper C. Maybee and his success with the young high school vocalists.

The remark was an apt one, for Mr. Maybee certainly gives, at his annual concerts, a program far superior to what would be expected of a high school choir of comparatively small dimensions; and one that is more finished and artistic than anything the school had been able to accomplish previous to his assuming the position of musical director. He has caught a good deal of the swing and spirit so noticeable in the conducting of Director F. H. Pease of the Normal Conservatory, where he graduated, and through it has worked his young charges up to a point where they bring out his interpretation of a composer with most commendable accuracy.

The cantata, "The Haymaker," which was given in full, does not present many serious difficulties, but at any rate it was excellently rendered, as were also the two choruses of "The Redemption," by which the program was closed.

The soloists were from the Conservatory and the high school and they all gave their parts with feeling and skill. They were: Miss Beatrice Smith, soprano; Mrs. L. A. Grey, contralto; Miss Ethel Clarke, mezzo; Arthur Bostick, tenor; A. C. Stitt, baritone; Dan Kimball, bass.

The chorus was assisted by Misses Abba Owen and Maraquita Wallin and Messrs. Sylvester Johnson and Louis Killian, violinists; H. W. Samson, 'cello; Roy Buell, bass, and Miss Ruth Putnam, piano.

The proceeds of the entertainment are to be divided between the senior class of the high school and the fund which has been created for the purpose of purchasing pictures for the high school hall.

TAU KAPPA THETA HELD A BANQUET

The recently organized Normal fraternity, Tau Kappa Theta, which is soon to be merged into the national fraternity, Alpha Tau Omega, made its debut into the social life of the college by a banquet at the Episcopal parish house Friday evening.

The banquet was served by the Episcopal ladies in the north parlors of the parish house, and covers were laid for thirty-two at eight small tables. The guests consisted of Dr. and Mrs. Leonard and the fifteen fraters and their ladies.

After the supper Joseph Sill assumed the post of toastmaster and introduced the following program: Minor White, piano solo; A. J. Dann, "The Bachelor's Prayer"; Miss Wheeler, vocal solo; A. C. Chubb, "What Our Fraternity Stands For"; C. C. McClelland, "How I Was Initiated"; Miss Laura Walters, "The New Fraternity"; Dr. Leonard, "Pi."

The dining room was decorated with yellow and white bunting, and the south parlor, where the guests were received, was draped with the bunting and rendered homelike and cozy by the presence of divans, pillows and screens.

THE TIGERS HAVE COMMENCED WORK

The Detroit base ball men began light work Thursday afternoon, spending an hour on the fair grounds diamond in running bases and throwing the ball back and forth.

It was a trifle cold for outdoor work yesterday morning, but in the afternoon the team put in two full hours in the fair grounds' baseball field, batting up flies, passing the ball around the bases and practicing hitting pitched balls. The grounds were in fair condition, although rough in places in the outfield, and the men got down to vigorous work. Around the diamond were grouped about 200 spectators, who looked with the greatest interest on the players and their work, and busied themselves relating to one another how at a certain game they had seen so-and-so of the team make some phenomenally good or unusually poor play. The small boys of the crowd extracted the greatest amount of pure pleasure from the situation, as it was a momentous event in their lives to see the kings of the diamond at such close hand, and to hear them laugh and joke after the manner of ordinary mortals.

Holmes, the famous outfielder, said yesterday afternoon that the team is 40 per cent better now than he has ever known it before at a corresponding time of the season. The men are a week ahead of the time that Stallings ordered them to report, and all are getting down to practice with the greatest enthusiasm.

COOK AND ROGERS GO TO MILWAUKEE

The Ypsilanti Whist club held its annual meeting Wednesday evening and elected the following officers:

President—H. S. Platt.

Vice-President—F. A. Merrill.

Secretary and Treasurer—C. W. Rogers.

Directors—W. E. McLeod, G. F. Key.

The reports of the secretary and treasurer showed a large membership, and a good balance on the right side of the ledger, with no debts.

The members voted to send B. E. Cook and C. W. Rogers to the eleventh annual congress of the American Whist League at Milwaukee, in July, to represent the club, and at the club's expense. This is something that is only done by the whist clubs of the largest cities, and it speaks well for the pride the Ypsilantians take in their organization. The Ypsilanti whisters have also the honor of belonging to one of the very largest American Whist League clubs in proportion to the size of the place.

After the election of officers, Wednesday evening, the second game of the handicap tournament was played, top scores being made by Wilber and Rogers.

THE PEOPLE KNEW HIM.

(Benson's Plaster is Pain's Master.)

George Washington made and sold flour, and every barrel of flour in the market branded "G. Washington, Mount Vernon," sold without delay. No question was ever raised as to quality or weight.

Benson's Porous Plaster sells on its reputation everywhere. All the buyer wants to be certain of is that the plaster offered him really is Benson's, and not a worthless imitation of it or substitute for it.

A plaster is the best form of external remedy, and Benson's is the best plaster; 5,000 physicians and druggists, and a multitude of people no man can number, have settled that. "You can trust it," they say.

Coughs, colds, lame back, lumbago, muscular stiffness and rheumatism, troubles of the liver and kidneys, influenza or grip, pneumonia, and all other diseases open to external treatment, are at once relieved and cured by Benson's Plaster.

Do not assume that Belladonna, Capsicum or Strengthening plasters are "just as good as" Benson's. They are vastly inferior.—No other plaster is as good as Benson's.

In competition with the best-known plasters of Europe and America, Benson's have received fifty-five highest awards.

FALSE CARD PLAYING.

A Bit of Whist Tactics of Infrequent Application.

THE ETHICS OF SIGNALING.

Few Players Know How to Derive Benefit From Signs—How to Show Command of Plain Suit on Third Round.

Now we get to the end of the American Whist league code and to the end of the whist season of 1900-1. The last paragraphs of the code treat of the signal in a plain suit to show command on the third round and of false card play. The former is a bit of tactics of infrequent application, the latter something more important, which is inadequately considered by all writers on whist because it is scarcely susceptible of systematic handling. If false carding were to be reduced to a system, it would no longer be false carding.

The "signal" is the playing of the higher before the lower of two cards of indifferent value at second, third or fourth hand. It means primarily a call for trumps; secondly, if trumps have been called for or led by partner, an echo; thirdly, if trumps have been developed so far or in such a manner that the signal cannot be mistaken for a signal or an echo the signal is understood to mean by the league system that the signaler has on the third round the master card of the suit led. The same device, in slightly different forms, is frequently used for the indication of plain suit strength in several other situations. On the "command on third round signal" the league code says:

"When trumps are out or the remaining trumps are marked with the adversaries or partner, holding combinations like the queen and two more in suit, play the second best and then the third best to show command on the third round.

"Holding a losing trump and two cards in a plain suit, the remaining trumps being marked with the adversaries or partner, the same signal may be given, asking partner to come with the third round of the plain suit.

"Holding the king and two others, with trumps out or the remaining trumps marked with the adversaries or partner, play the second best on the ace led, holding up the small card to show command."

This signaling business, I must say, is a part of the game that few, very few, players know how to manage for a profit. A good thing about the league code is that it doesn't preach a great deal on the religion of signals. Still, I think it suggests and recognizes even too much in this direction. Of course the code doesn't pretend to teach players how to play the game without practice and experience. It merely lays down the conventional, empirical, arbitrary rules. This is its sole purpose, unfortunately. In my series of articles I have tried to supplement the rules by illustrations from actual play, every one of which has been based on the highest authority, showing something about the strategy, the general management, the analysis, the perception, of card play. If I have stimulated a very small percentage of my readers to an appreciation of the possibilities of the game and have entertained the rest, I am satisfied.

An illustration of the "signal to show command" is found in Foster's correspondence tourney ("Whist Tactics," deal 13, b.). The 6 of hearts was turned West, and North led to the first trick. The winning card in each trick is underlined, and the card beneath is next led:

TRICK.	NORTH.	EAST.	SOUTH.	WEST.
1	Q ♠	A ♠	4 ♠	3 ♠
2	7 ◇	5 ◇	8 ◇	Q ◇
3	♡ 2	3 ◇	4 ◇	2 ◇
4	♡ 4	♡ J	♡ K	♡ 6
5	♡ 3	♡ 8	♡ A	♡ 7
6	7 ♠	8 ♠	K ♠	10 ♠
7	♣ 7	♡ Q	♡ 5	♡ 9
8	♣ 3	K ◇	A ◇	9 ◇
9	♣ Q	♣ 6	♣ J	♣ 2
10	♣ A	6 ♠	♣ 9	♣ 5
11	♣ K	9 ♠	2 ♠	♣ 10
12	♣ 8	6 ◇	5 ♠	10 ◇
13	♣ 4	J ◇	♡ 10	J ♠

NOTES.

Trick 1.—The leader here was a player of genius, a "short suiter," whom we lament, because he died before his fame was secure. The last card he played was almost simultaneous with his last breath and was played at the end of this tourney. In this deal he knew that, with his extreme weakness outside of clubs, he could not make more than a trick or two if he led them first, for then his hand would be dead. Therefore he led a short suit, so as to preserve what strength he had, give partner an opportunity and await developments. Notice that he did not lead his small singleton diamond for the mere hope of the ruff. The true short suit theory is opposed to that. He reasoned: "My only chance to make these great clubs is to find partner reasonably strong in trumps, of which there is a probability, but not so great as to justify me in leading them from my weak holding, and also to find him with some strength in plain suits. To weaken the latter I cannot afford, as I probably would do if I led the small diamond without having anything in the suit myself. Consequently my play is to lead a card that may be of service in clearing a suit for partner, if he has it, without doing him a possible injury if he has it not." This was genuine whist strategy not contained in the books, but in the opinion of players of the same school quite sound. However, I know the league code advises the lead of the queen of clubs, etc., and it is safe enough if one wishes to be good rather than superlative.

Tricks 2 to 5.—East opened his best suit, South signaled for trumps, West won and returned the diamonds, North ruffed and answered partner's call and South led a second round of trumps.

Trick 6.—South was now afraid to go on with trumps lest the adversaries go down the line with clubs. So he returned his partner's suit, and the situation seems to have dawned on him.

Tricks 7 and 8.—North signaled to show command in clubs.

Trick 9.—Here East, if the situation had dawned on him, too, could have made another trick by leading a spade, but the point was too fine for him.

Trick 10.—And the signal made by North having given South the cue, the rest was a "lay down."

Score—N. and S., 10; E. and W., 3.

The same deal was played as follows at another table, where I was East, and the greatest whist strategist in the tourney, though not the winner, because he had not sufficient Napoleonic opportunities, was South:

TRICK.	NORTH.	EAST.	SOUTH.	WEST.
1	A ♣ Q	♣ 6	♣ 9	♣ 2
2	♣ K	♡ J	♣ J	♣ 5
3	7 ◇	5 ◇	4 ◇	Q ◇
4	Q ♠	6 ♠	4 ♠	J ♠
5	♣ A	♡ Q	8 ◇	♣ 10
6	♣ 3	J ◇	A ◇	9 ◇
7	♡ 2	♡ 8	♡ K	♡ 6
8	♡ 3	8 ♠	♡ 10	♡ 9
9	♡ 4	3 ◇	♡ A	♡ 7
10	7 ♠	9 ♠	2 ♠	10 ♠
11	♣ 4	K ◇	♡ 5	10 ◇
12	♣ 7	A ♠	K ♠	3 ♠
13	♣ 8	6 ◇	5 ♠	2 ◇

NOTES.

Tricks 1 and 2.—The routine opening. I trumped high at second hand because it looked as though South, having played so high a club as the 9, might trump over me.

Trick 3.—I opened my suit, and partner won.

Trick 4.—Why my partner did not return the diamonds I never clearly understood, but it was a good thing and seems to have been an "intuition." Holding up the ace of spades was quite the correct play on my part, as the sequel shows.

Tricks 5 to 9.—North persisted with his clubs, I got in again and cleared my diamonds, South drew the adverse trumps—apparently thinking North had the ace of spades—and then Tricks 10 to 13.—Found us with all the good cards.

Score—N. and S., 7; E. and W., 6.

There was a difference of three tricks on the deal, which is fully accounted for by North's opening at the first table.

Concerning false card play the league code says:

"False card play is a part of the strategy of the game. Whether to indulge in it or not, and to what extent, is a matter for the individual judgment of the player. It is often judicious, and it frequently works both ways."

Valid illustrations of false card tactics, which really deceive the adversary to your own advantage, are as rare as white blackbirds. In the whole of the Foster correspondence match, which was chockful of the most deliberate, carefully planned and ingenious attempts at deception, there is not one clear example of gain by this sort of play and scarcely one of giving the adversary any trouble whatever. An instance of useless false carding occurs in the second of the foregoing diagrams, at trick 8, where West played the 9 of trumps instead of the 7. The trouble with false carding is that it weakens your partner's confidence in your play. It takes an expert of the first water to tell just when you may false card without deceiving your partner as much as your adversaries or more. I never did believe in it or see any good in it, and so I advise the player, tyro or expert, not to practice it.

ANSWER TO LAST WEEK'S PROBLEM.

(North's hand and the play of the first six tricks were given, and it was required to place the remaining cards. The 3 of hearts was turned by West, and North led to the first trick.) The whole deal goes as follows:

TRICK.	NORTH	EAST.	SOUTH.	WEST.
1	♣ A	♣ 3	♣ 4	♣ 5
2	♣ J	♣ K	♣ 6	♣ 10
3	4 ♠	K ♠	3 ♠	5 ♠
4	8 ♠	7 ♠	J ♠	6 ♠
5	K ◇	A ◇	J ◇	Q ◇
6	♡ 9	♡ Q	♡ 7	♡ 4
7	♡ 10	♡ J	♡ 8	♡ 3
8	9 ♠	♡ 2	♡ K	♡ A
9	4 ◇	2 ◇	5 ◇	10 ◇
10	7 ◇	3 ◇	8 ◇	9 ◇
11	♣ 7	6 ◇	♣ 2	♡ 6
12	♣ 8	10 ♠	♣ 9	♡ 5
13	♣ Q	Q ♠	A ♠	2 ♠

NOTES.

The key of the problem is the location of the 2 of spades. When it appears at trick 4 that West must be holding up the 2 of spades, it is clear that he started a trump call and declined to complete it, and this is the clew to the whole mystery.

BOLAND GETS THE PLYMOUTH FRANCHISE

A meeting of the township board of Plymouth was held Wednesday evening to consider the granting of a franchise to Mr. Boland, of Jackson, for an electric line through the township. A Mr. Miner represented Mr. Boland. The franchise submitted by Mr. Miner called for the right of way along the north side of the Ann Arbor road from the western limits of the township to the west limits of the village. This was changed to the south side. Mr. Miner said his company did not expect to use the highway at all, as a private right of way was being purchased from Jackson to Detroit. The board refused to give a franchise from the east limits of the village to the east line of the township, on the Ann Arbor road, as it is now occupied by the D., P. & N. The franchise called for this route, but Mr. Miner stated that this part of the route would be adjusted, intimating an understanding with the D., P. & N. Co. Other provisions of the charter were agreed upon to suit the township board, and at a meeting held yesterday afternoon the board adopted the resolutions. It is expected the line will be completed by next fall.—Plymouth Mail.

OUTLOOK FOR TELEGRAPHY.

Interesting Changes Predicted For the Twentieth Century.

The state of the art of electrical communication today may be summed up as follows:

	Words a minute.
Telephony	60
Single Morse circuits	15
Duplex Morse circuits	30
Quadruplex Morse circuits	50
Multiplex (six circuits)	80
Wheatstone automatic	125
Wheatstone automatic duplex	200
Wireless	10

Undoubtedly before the new century is ten years old at least one-half of the correspondence now carried by train will be telegraphed at an average rate for the whole country of 15 cents for 50 words, or five times as many words for one-half the present telegraph toll, says Patrick B. Delaney in The Electrical World and Engineer. It is practicable to begin this change at once, but not by present methods of operation. It is only possible by the chemical automatic system.

What the centenarian of 100 years hence may see a prophet should leave to his son to prophesy. In the way of telegraphy doubtless the ships amain will hold converse with each other and correct their chronometers with the last observation 100 miles away. They will be in constant communication with the shore through the air or by wires on the bed of the ocean, but as the trip from the Hook to the Lizard will be done in a day and probably without touching the water only the overanxious will want a dispatch. Communication with Mars has already been pre-empted, and seeing by electricity may be no longer visionary. Forsooth our seven senses may all be "wired" wirelessly.

MISS LODEMAN'S ART EXIBITION

Miss Hilda Lodeman, the daughter of Prof. August Lodeman, who has but recently returned from several years' art study in Germany, held an exhibition of her work at the Ladies' Library last week that proved a sensation in art circles of the city.

Miss Lodeman is endowed with great native talent, and had executed many beautiful oils and water colors before her departure for the old world art cencenters, and her later pieces are vastly superior to the productions with which her friends are already familiar. The 28 pieces which covered the walls of the parlor in the Library building made an exhibition which has never before been approached by Ypsilanti talent; and which clearly shows that its young creator has before her a brilliant career, if her later years fulfill in any measure the promise of the present.

The collection comprises two superb oil paintings, eleven water colors, three etchings, three book plates and ten copies from the old masters; all being of a universal excellence which attests to a breadth of power, as depth is revealed in each single one.

THE FIRST BABY.

Its Coming is Looked Forward to With Both Joy and Fear and its Safe Arrival is Hailed With Pride and Delight by All.

The arrival of the first baby in the household is the happiest and most important event of married life. The young wife who is to become a mother delights to think of the happiness in store for her when the little one shall nestle upon her breast and latterly she shall hear it lisp the sweet and holy name, "mother." But her happy anticipation quickly vanishes when she realizes the terrible pain and suffering through which she must pass while bringing the little one into the world. An indescribable fear of the danger attendant upon the ordeal soon dissipates her joyfulness.

Thousands of women have learned by experience that there is absolutely no necessity for the sufferings which attend child-birth; they know that by the use of "Mother's Friend"—a scientific liniment—for a few weeks before the trying hour, expectant mothers can so prepare themselves for the final hour that the pain and suffering of the dreaded event are entirely obviated and it is safely passed through with comparatively little discomfort.

All women are interested, and especially expectant mothers who for the first time have to undergo this trial, in such a remedy; for they know the pain and suffering, to say nothing of the danger, which is in store for them. "Mother's Friend" is woman's greatest blessing, for it takes her safely through the severest ordeal of her life. Every woman should be glad to read the little book "Before Baby is Born," which contains information of great value to all. It will be sent free to any one who sends their address to The Bradfield Regulator Co., Atlanta, Ga.

THURSDAY, APRIL 4, 1901.

There was a light vote throughout the state Monday on the state ticket and the republican candidates for justice of the supreme court and regents of the university were elected by large majorities, only limited by the number who thought it worth while to go to the polls. There had been some talk of a breaking away from the republican ticket in some sections, notably Detroit, on account of the bad work of the legislature and of Boss Tom Navin, but it of course did not materialize. Nobody really expected it would. The republicans are under such thorough party discipline that the rank and file are ready to follow the boss no matter how odious he may be. It is true they broke away from him in Washtenaw last fall, but no sooner did they find the loaves and fishes in other hands than they made haste to again march under the leadership of the same boss. Nothing is more certain than that the great majority of voters prefer republican control to democratic no matter what the republicans may do or not do. This condition of things may be just as discreditable to democrats as to republicans, but there is no question as to the fact. It is not a healthy condition, but there seems to be no relief from it.

The republicans of Ann Arbor have won a glorious victory, and if they keep a united front this will be but a prelude to a long series that will follow. A community as intelligent as this one is is normally republican. If it casts a vote for another party it is because the republican party has on some local issue been false to the people or to its traditions.—Washtenaw Times.

The above bit of cant is a gem and altogether becoming to the pharisaical Times. A community as intelligent, etc. We thank thee, oh Lord, that we are not as other people are. If the Times had been on earth nineteen hundred years ago it is perfectly clear where it would have stood on the great trial of that time.

According to cable Aguinaldo has subscribed to an oath that he will from this time on make no more war on the United States. He appears to have taken the only sensible view of the situation. There is a paragraph more or less in Gen. MacArthur's report, however, which the Washington authorities seem to have thought the people could not be trusted with. This is supposed to be a government for the people and frankness and openness would seem to be what is demanded of the officials in all such matters. Secrecy too often means the covering up of something that is not just right.

The "Red Chieftain" is now pretty certain to sit on the oil tank of the state of Michigan for two years more. He has demonstrated to Gov. Bliss the fact that without him Washtenaw lines up with the democrats, but with him in full charge victory is easy. The party split under his boss rule, but it has united again under the same leadership. He was the first republican who had carried the county in years when he was elected sheriff and he has now shown that the county under his leadership is safely republican. Who says he should not be rewarded? Yesterday's accomplishment has again sent his stock above par.

Mayor-elect O. E. Thompson of Ypsilanti is a man who has spent his life in the city and been successful in building up a large and profitable business. He believes Ypsilanti with the advantages it possesses in water power and transportation facilities ought to be a larger city than it is and he proposes to do all in his power during his term to give the city a good government and boom its business. It is hoped he may be as successful in this as he has been in his private business.

Washtenaw, the Ararat of democracr, was submerged Monday under a flood of republican votes. The republican state ticket carries the county by a good majority and the republican candidate for commissioner of schools appears to have all the votes needed. The board of supervisors is democratic, but it is not clear why the republicans permitted this to be so.

FOSTER BEAT HOPPE BY 329

RESULT A SURPRISE

Montgomery Leads Adsit in the County by Above 600 Votes.

All the returns except from the township of Dexter have been received and show that Foster, for school commissioner, is elected by a larger plurality than was figured on yesterday. Without Dexter township he has 367 more than Hoppe. The missing township will probably reduce this plurality down to about 350.

For justice of the supreme court, Montgomery leads Adsit by 608 [illegible] Dexter township to hear from. He probably carries Washtenaw by about 600.

The following table shows the returns received:

Scrofula

Is a disease as old as antiquity, and as young as the newest born infant.

It has infested the blood of humanity from ancient times down to the present minute.

It is hereditary or may be acquired.

It appears in swollen glands, scrofulous sores, hip disease, boils, pimples, eruptions, and, as believed by high authorities, even in the forms of catarrh and rheumatism.

It can be cured by taking Hood's Sarsaparilla faithfully and persistently.

We know this, because Hood's Sarsaparilla has done it.

It will cure you if you give it a trial.

You should begin to take it today.

Hip Disease—"I suffered from hip disease; had 5 running sores; used crutches and each winter I was confined to my bed for weeks at a time. Mr. and Mrs. Jay Worden terminated their stay in Arkansas sooner than they had expected, as the residence of Mr. Worden's brother, where they were visiting, was burned to the ground. A large hotel caught fire and the flames were blown to the Worden house, which burned so rapidly that but little of the furniture could be saved.

The wonderfully successful melodrama, "The Span of Life," which has been for six years the greatest theatrical success of four continents, will be presented at the Ypsilanti opera house Monday, April 8, and this will probably be the last chance offered for seeing it, as the sompany are engaged for an Australian tour next season.

Among the republicans who are appearing as candidates for the city clerkship, which will be at the disposal of the new republican council, are Will Carpenter, Ben Kief and Will Smith. A number of prominent republicans have promised their support to C. L. Stevens, but he has not yet given a decided answer either as to whether he would or would not accept if chosen.

E. E. Jones, the former proprietor of the Hawkins House, who is charged by H. M. Tyler, his successor, with having sold a cash register which did not belong to him, was to have had his hearing before Justice Childs Tuesday morning, but on account of the absence of the prosecuting attorney the case was adjourned to Thursday, April 11. Tyler cannot be found, so the case will probably be dismissed.

The Washtenaw Electric Co. have sold the two dynamos used in their east side quarters before the Geddes plant was constructed, to a Toledo company, and they have shipped considerable of the rest of the machinery from the east side to Geddes. The boilers on the east side will have to be kept in operation until the weather becomes warm enough for the Michigan Central station to do without heating.

The Washtenaw County Farmers' Vigilance association, comprising the townships of Ypsilanti, Pittsfield, York and Augusta, held their annual convention at Stony Creek. Following is a list of the officers elected for the coming year: President, L. A. Wilcox, Milan; vice preseident, Jesse Hewens, Augusta; secretary, J. C. Bemiss, Ypsilanti; treasurer, C. H. Roberts, Pittsfield; executive committee, Norman Redner, Stony Creek; C. E. Sanderson, Augusta; W. P. Elliot and John S. Seaver, Ypsilanti; M. F. Case and Fred Hutzel, Pittsfield; George F. Richards and Wiles Dexter, Milan. The association is doing very successful work.

The comedy, "Paul Pry," which is to be played at the Cleary College hall by the students of the college, is an admirable comedy in three acts by John Poole, the famous English comedian. The title gives one an idea of the play, as Paul Pry is one of those inquisitive, meddling persons who is constantly prying into other peoples' affairs and thereby gets himself in some amusing plights.

Peter J. Snyder, who for the past six or seven years has been the chief clerk in D. M. Chamber's store, has resigned that position and has started in business for himself at Ypsilanti. Mr. Snyder has lived in Wayne the most of his life, and is well known by most of our people, and we do not exaggerate when we state that no young man in the community has more friends than he. Genial, courteous, and painstaking in his dealings with the public, he cannot help but make a host of friends in his new field of labor. And while we will be missed here, we wish him abundant success in his new field.—Wayne Review.

There promises to be any number of republican faithful who will not object, it is said, to having the right to write "city clerk" after their names. The tide has only commenced to flow in, but it is said to have already cast up the names of Ben Kief, Will Carpenter, W. E. Smith, E. A. Holbrook and Alderman C. L. Stevens. Who the lucky man will be, of course, is impossible to predict at this time, but undoubtedly the aldermen will be importuned by the friends of the various candidates. This will give the new members a chance to learn a little as to what it means to be an alderman. From the number and standing of the candidates it is evident that the office is not to go begging at the present salary.

ANNUAL MEETING LADIES' LIBRARY

The annual meeting of the Ladies' Library Association was held at the Library building Monday, when the following officers were elected for the coming year:

President—Mrs. F. A. Todd.

Vice-President—Mrs. James Brown.

Recording Secretary—Mrs. J. B. Van Fossen.

Corresponding Secretary—Miss Nura Murphy.

Treasurer—Mrs. Edmund Hewitt.

New board members—Mrs. George Walterhouse and Miss Putnam.

The secretary, Mrs. J. B. Van Fossen, presented her annual report.

"The library board has held during the past year eleven regular and four special meetings.

"Almost the first thing for the ladies to do after the last annual meeting was to prepare for the Normal dinner. From this the association cleared $92, and with this fund of ready money $100 was paid on the note at the bank.

"The Literary and Study clubs have held most of their meetings in the Library building.

"Early in January of the new century Mr. Lucius Gould gave a talk in the library hall on "Famous Concord." This lecture added $9 to the library treasury.

"It has been stated by a former secretary that the struggles of the Ladies' Library board were very similar to the proverbial 'toad in the well,' that climbed up two feet to fall back one.

"I am sure that the Ladies' Library board need not now feel like the 'toad in the well," for since the library opened its doors and gave out books to the public, it has from time to time had its funds for running expenses increased by our 'city fathers,' as it became necessary for the association to incur more expense.

"First, the city allowed us $250, to give its people the free reading they so much desired; then came an increase to $500; and just recently the council voted to allow $750 each year for the Library expenses, and the free use of city water was given.

"It has also been decided to appoint a library committee on the council, and then our woes can be poured into their listening ears. For all of these and other courtesies the board feel duly grateful.

"It has now become necessary to consider plans to enlarge the Library quarters, and I think we shall soon see the librarians giving out books from the upper floor of the building, and I dare venture that a new face will be among the librarians, as to have more help has also become absolutely necessary."

The treasurer, Mrs. Edmund Hewitt, reported $760 receipts for the past year and $757 expenditue, the receipts coming from the $399 given by the city, and from membership fees, fines, rent of hall, the Normal dinner, Gould lecture and fines against board members; while the expenses consisted in janitor hire, book binding, gas, librarian's salary, new books, coal, water, telephone, paving and $20 in incidentals.

Before adjourning the association voted thanks to Ald Van Fossen and his library committee, who recommended to the council that the library be allowed $750 per year, after they had conferred with the Library board and had looked into the library's needs.

Warner's Safe Cure

For a Quarter of a Century

A BEACON LIGHT TO HEALTH.

Judge T. A. McMahon, of Chicago, writes:
Fourteen years' liver complaint seriously interfered with my official duties. I was dosed with pills and powders until I lost heart and courage. At last I tried Warner's Safe Cure. I do not wonder everybody speaks well of it. Eight bottles cleaned me from head to foot, and I am a well man.

Whenever opportunity presents, I prescribe Warner's Safe Cure, and I have yet to see a patient dissatisfied with the results where a disease of the kidneys or genito-organs existed.

Henry Hill, Casher Standard Oil Co., Chicago, Ill.
I suffered with kidney and liver trouble for eight months. It upset my entire system and made me unfit for work. The doctors finally advised me to take Warner's Safe Cure. Within one week after beginning its use, the burning sensation had partially disappeared. In two weeks more I considered myself cured, and I have been in perfect health ever since.

Could there be stronger testimony or from more reputable men? Do not longer delay, but begin to-day the use of Warner's Safe Cure, and thus secure the greatest of all blessings good health.

FOR A $60,000 RACE.

Thomas W. Lawson Issues a Challenge to Trotters.

If the plans proposed by that gamest of American sportsmen, Thomas W. Lawson of Boston, do not miscarry, New England will have a trotting race this season that will compare more than favorably from a financial standpoint with the richest running races in the world. No less than $60,000 will be hung up for the long tails in one event if the original plan be adhered to, and if the event should be made open to all, as it should be, the sum may be $90,000.

Mr. Lawson is the owner of the trotting gelding Boralma, 2:08. The quotation of Boralma's record gives little idea of the estimation in which the horse is held by experts. Boralma, who is now 5 years old, was bought by Mr. Lawson for $17,000 as a 3-year-old. That year he captured two events of $10,000 each and in turf parlance "won himself out." Last year he was not beaten, and, though he was so lame that in the $10,000 Massachusetts Stakes his owner requested that pools be not sold on him, he got away with that event, as well as the $5,000 Transylvania Stakes and other races. Horsemen, in fact, regard Boralma as a practically invincible horse.

And so, as was to be expected from a man of Mr. Lawson's stamp, he will not be content until his horse has been thoroughly tried out with the best trotters in the country, which is the same as saying the world in this connection. He proposes that each owner put up $10,000, the association getting the big event to add $20,000, and names Cresceus, Charlie Herr and The Abbot as the opponents of Boralma. According to Mr. Lawson's sporting proposition, the money would be divided as follows: $40,000 to first, $15,000 to second and $5,000 to third. It is an almost sure thing that if the race comes off it will be at the Readville (Mass.) track.

In an interview Fire Commissioner J. J. Scannell, the new owner of The Abbot, said that he would not enter his horse in a sweepstake race, but was perfectly willing to arrange any other kind of a match with a single horse. His reason for objecting to a sweepstake race is that it would enable one horse to act as pacer for another.

LADIES' TAILORS' STRIKE.

Should It Continue In Paris, Summer Clothing Will Be Affected.

The strike among ladies' tailors in Paris was extended recently by about 65,000 dressmakers and seamstresses employed by 1,950 establishments going out and joining the cutters and fitters, who are for the most part men. It is said that should the strike continue into the season employed in the making of summer clothing it will seriously affect important woman's clothing houses all over Europe, while the strikers can obtain plenty of profitable work by setting up for themselves, as many of them have already done. Another report is that preparations are being made in Paris for the establishment of a large union tailoring institution to be operated in opposition to the well known and fashionable Paris tailors whose employees are out on strike.

About 4,000 tailors and tailoresses gathered recently in the Bourse du Travail, where many addresses were read. One woman read out the demands of the women strikers, saying that, whatever might be said of other occupations, in tailoring women should receive the same wages as men, if not higher. Her demands for herself and fellow tailoresses were: Eight hours a day for 10 francs; 2 francs 50 centimes per hour for overtime; two hours for luncheon and dinner; the workrooms to be swept at least twice a day, during the time that the "slaves" were at their meals.

More Honors For "Bobs."

Lord Roberts will soon be able to add a few more letters to his name. He is already an LL. D. of three universities and D. C L. of one, and now the senate of Trinity college, Dublin, which was the first to make him a doctor of laws, in 1880, proposes to add to that distinction by conferring upon him the honorary degree of doctor of letters. This is more particularly in recognition of the merits of Earl Roberts' literary work, of which "Forty-one Years In India" is not the only example.

She reported they were safe and that they will return home at once from which it is inferred that they lost their wardrobes. MARRIAGE AND LONGEVITY.

German Doctor's Theory Interests Our Census Experts.

The experts of the census bureau have read with special interest a theory advanced by Dr. Prinzing of Germany that marriage is the secret of longevity.

The census bureau people here, however, say that they have no vital statistics such as are quoted by Dr. Prinzing from German archives to sustain that theory. Nor have they the figures to sustain the declaration that suicide is less frequent among married than among unmarried people.

William E. King is the chief of the division of vital statistics of the present census, which place he also filled during the compiling of the tenth and eleventh censuses. Discussing the German scientist's theory with the New York Journal representative, Mr. King arrived at an open verdict. He does not decide the case for or against Dr. Prinzing.

"I would not undertake," he said, "to either confirm the statement of Dr. Prinzing or deny it on the basis of our census figures. It must be remembered that census figures represent only one short period in each decade.

"To establish a universal rule would require much research and careful observation over a long period of time, which is not possible under our present method of gathering statistics. In the states where we depend entirely upon the work of the decennial enumerator the rule set down by the German physician would not be affirmed.

"In the New England states, where there is a registry system, especially in the large cities, where the population is congested, the rule might not be disproved, but of that I am not prepared to speak accurately.

"The point is that we have no accurate and up to date figures dealing with the whole country that would justify any positive conclusion.

"Statistics in some thickly settled states have shown that there is a greater percentage of schedules among the single than among the married, but the results had in those states are not applicable to others, nor can the statistics of one state be accepted as representing the general condition throughout the United States."

Isn't it Worth 25c. To Be Cured of Constipation

People who suffer from habitual constipation with all its attendant ills, clogged stomach and bowels, sluggish liver, heartburn, indigestion, and thin and impure blood, are too apt to believe that the only remedy is violent purgatives. The contrary is the case. Such cathartics, even if they do move the bowels, are irritating and griping, leave the stomach inflamed and enfeebled and the constipated condition recurs with greater difficulty of cure and the sufferer constantly growing worse. There is a laxative that moves the bowels without pain or griping, cleanses the stomach, sharpens the appetite, stimulates the liver, strengthens the nerves, and purifies the blood, while its marvellous tonic properties tone up the entire system and keep it healthy.

Laxakola Does It

Its remarkable tonic properties reach every organ—the liver, kidneys and stomach, nerve, heart and brain—and removes the cause of your debilitated condition. This is the only way to secure an absolute and permanent cure.

Laxakola is the only medicine for babies, is purely vegetable and its action is gentle, speedy and effective. For coated tongue, simple fevers, colds, chills and languid feeling it is the ideal medicine.

Laxakola, the great tonic laxative, is not only the most efficient of family remedies, but the most economical, because it combines two medicines, viz: laxative and tonic, and at one price. No other remedy gives so much for the money. At druggists, 25c. and 50c., or send for free sample to LAXAKOLA CO., 182 Nassau Street, N. Y., or 356 Dearborn Street, Chicago.

Easter Fashions

After all life is not worth living unless we can have new millinery for Easter. Woe to the woman who has to go to church on Easter morning in an old or made over hat! If the preacher does not single her out for anathema, the other women will, and never can she hold up her head again. At least that is what she thinks at the time. Some women get the grip or headache or hysteria on that fateful day. There is no use telling a woman that beauty unadorned is adorned the most. She knows better, and it is a dyspeptic and mean wretch of a man who refuses her a hat with all the flowers of the field, the birds of the air and a few of the beasts of the forest upon it.

But, to speak a little more seriously, the new millinery is very handsome and becoming and not at all inartistic. The colors are, generally speaking, vivid and showy, though the woman of fine taste can have what she likes, inasmuch as there are infinite numbers of hats in plain colors, with green leaves or draperies for sole garniture. Royal purple, scarlet and yellow combined and, in fact, all the brilliant primary colors are seen and in abundance, and it is not considered a mark of savagery to wear half a dozen of them combined. Still we see black chip in a walking shape with black panne drapery around the crown and with a bunch of shaded green leaves applied in form of a plume curling around the left side of the brim. The left side of the brim is considerably higher than the other. Very pretty combinations are made in different shades of brown, and I may add that panne seems to be the favorite of all the materials for foundations for toques and for draperies. The fancy straws require but little trimming, and that is usually in the shape of flowers, roses of magnificent size and color, such as would cause a florist to dance with joy.

The Aiglon hat is a variation on the Continental. This shape is always very becoming to young faces, but older ones look better in the softer toques, which are still with us. There are many of these in panne and many more in tulle and chiffon draped closely over rather flat frames. These are worn tipped high on the left side and have flowers beneath the brim or ruffles of chiffon or rosettes in some preferred color, for the foundation is almost always black. Evening church and club hats are generally in toque shape, and some of the very prettiest of them have a foundation of white chiffon and over this a piece of fine chantilly thread lace—black, of course. There is nothing softer and better suited for such occasions. An aigret or a few delicate flowers finish these, and they are always refined.

There is a new shape somewhat after the shepherdess form, but this is larger and has the brim much wider on the left side. In black chip, with a drapery of soft, dark green crape and with a small ruche of mignonette green and rusty red gathered under the left side of the brim, this is a hat not to be overlooked.

One may say that the rather flat models are quite as often seen as before, and several unmistakable poke shapes are seen, also a few of the high crowned hats and rolled brims.

Some hats, even those to wear with tailor suits, have the whole top covered with flowers, mostly roses, in light tints. One straw hat has a wreath of white roses around the whole brim. This gives it a sentimental look, like a girl in the old song who "wore a wreath of roses above her marble brow."

Tulle is sometimes painted and dusted with metal dust for making crowns and bows to handsome evening bonnets; also silk mull is often run with gilt threads and used to make fine toques. Capotes are not in the swim this Easter except for old ladies.

AN ENGLISH WOMAN'S LOVE LETTERS.

Published by arrangement with Doubleday, Page & Co., New York, the authorized publishers of these Letters in America.

LETTER XVII.

Dearest—Do I not write you long letters? It reveals my weakness. I have thought (it had been coming on me and now and then had broken out of me before I met you) that, left to myself, I should have become a writer of books—I scarcely can guess what sort—and gone contentedly into middle age with that instead of this as my raison d'etre.

How gladly I lay down that part of myself and say, "But for you I had been this quite other person, whom I have no wish to be now!" Beloved, your heart is the shelf where I put all my uncut volumes, wondering a little what sort of a writer I should have made and chiefly wondering would you have liked me in that character.

There is one here in the family who considers me a writer of the darkest dye and does not approve of it. Benjy comes and sits mournfully facing me when I settle down on a sunny morning such as this to write and inquires, with all the dumbness a dog is capable of, "What has come between us, that you fill up your time and mine with those cat's claw scratchings, when you should be in your woodland dress running [with] me through damp places?"

Having written this sentimental meaning into his eyes and Benjy still watching me, I was seized with ruth for my neglect of him and took him to see his mother's grave. At the bottom of the long walk is our dog's cemetery. No tombstones, but mounds, and a dog rose grows there and flourishes as nowhere else. It was my fancy as a child to have it planted, and I declare to you it has taken wonderfully to the notion, as if it knew that it had relations of a higher species under its keeping. Benjy, too, has a profound air of knowing and never scratches for bones there as he does in other places. What horror were I to find him dragging up his mother's skeleton! Would my esteem for him survive?

When we got there today, he deprecated my choice of locality, asking what I had brought him there for. I pointed out to him the precise mound which covered the object of his earliest affections and gathered you these buds. Are they not a deep color for wild ones?—if their blush remains a fixed state till the post brings them to you.

Through what flower would you like best to be passed back, as regards your material atoms, into the spiritualized side of nature, when we have done with ourselves in this life? No single flower quite covers all my wants and aspirations. You and I would put our heads together underground and evolve a new flower—"carnation, lily, lily, rose"—and send it up one fine morning for scientists to dispute over and give diabolical learned names to. What an end to our cozy floral collaboration that would be!

Here endeth the epistle. The elect salutes you. This week, if the authorities permit, I shall be paying you a flying visit, with wings full of eyes, and, I hope, healing. For I believe you are seedy and that that is what is behind it. You notice I have not complained. Dearest, how could I? My happiness reaches to the clouds—that is, to where things are not quite clear at present. I love you no more than I ought, yet far more than I can name. Good night and good morning. Your star, since you call me so.

LETTER XVIII.

Dearest—Not having had a letter from you this morning, I have read over some back ones and find in one a bidding which I have never fulfilled, to tell you what I do all day. Was that to avoid the too great length of my telling you what I think? Yet you get more of me this way than that. What I do is every day much the same, while what I think is always different. However, since you want a woman of action rather than of brain, here I start telling you.

I wake punctual and hungry at the sound of Nan-nan's drawing of the blinds. Wait till she is gone (the old darling potters and tattles; it is her most possessive moment of me in the day, except when I sham headaches and let her put me to bed); then I have my hand under my pillow and draw out your last for a reading that has lost count whether it is the twenty-second or the fifty-second time, discover new beauties in it and run to the glass to discover new beauties in myself; find them. Benjy comes up with the post's latest, and, behold, my day is begun!

Is that the sort of thing you want to know? My days are without an action worth naming. I only think swelling thoughts and write some of them. If ever I do anything worth telling, be sure I run a pen and ink race to tell you. No, it is man who does things. A woman only "fusses," to adapt a word of diminutive sound for the occasion, unless, good, fortunate, independent thing, she works for her own living, and that is not me!

I feel sometimes as if a real bar were between me and a whole conception of life, because I have carpets and curtains and Nan-nan and Benjy and, last of all, you, shutting me out from the realities of existence.

If you would all leave me just for one full moon and come back to me only when I was starving for you all, for my tea to be brought to me in the morning and all the paddings and cushionings which bolster me up from morning till night, with what a sigh of wisdom I would drop back into your arms and would let you draw the rose colored curtains round me again!

Now I am afraid lest I have become too happy. I am leaning so far out of window to welcome the dawn I seem to be tempting a fall—heaven itself to fall upon me.

What do I know truly who only know so much happiness?

Dearest, if there is anything else in love which I do not know, teach it me quickly. I am utterly yours. If there is sorrow to give, give it me. Only let me have with it the consciousness of your love.

Oh, my dear, I lose myself if I think of you so much. What would life have without you in it? The sun would drop from my heavens. I see only by you! You have kissed me on the eyes. You are more to me than my own poor brain could ever have devised. Had I started to invent paradise, I could not have invented you. But perhaps you have invented me. I am something new to myself since I saw you first. God bless you for it!

Even if you were to shut your eyes at me now—though I might go blind—you could not unmake me. "The gods themselves cannot recall their gifts." Also that I am yours is a gift of the gods, I will trust, and so, not to be recalled!

Kiss me, dearest; here where I have written this! I am yours, beloved. I kiss you again and again. Ever your own making.

LETTER XIX.

Dearest, Dearest—How long has this happened? You don't tell me the day or the hour. Is it ever since you last wrote? Then you have been in pain and grief for four days—and I not knowing anything about it! And you have no hand in the house kind enough to let you dictate by it one small word to poor me? What heartless merry-makings may I not have sent you to worry you, when soothing was the one thing wanted! Well, I will not worry now, then, neither at not being told nor at not being allowed to come. But I will come thus and thus, oh, my dear heart, and take you in my arms. And you will be comforted, will you not be? when I tell you that even if you had no legs at all I would love you just the same? Indeed, dearest, so much of you is a superfluity. Just your heart against mine and the sound of your voice would carry me up to more heavens than I could otherwise have dreamed of.

I may say now, now that I know it was not your choice, what a void these last few days the lack of letters has been to me. I wondered truly if you had found it well to put off such visible signs for awhile in order to appease one who in other things more essential sees you rebellious. But the wonder is over now, and I don't want you to write, not till a consultation of doctors orders it for the good of your health. I will be so happy talking to you. Also I am sending you books, those I wish you to read and which now you must, since you have the leisure. And I for my part will make time and read yours. Whose do you most want me to read that my education in your likings may become complete? What I send you will not deprive me of anything, for I have the beautiful complete set—your gift—and shall read side by side with you to realize in imagination what the happiness of reading them for the first time ought to be.

Yesterday, by a most unsympathetic instinct, I went out for a long tramp on my two feet, and no ache in them came and told me of you. Over Sillingford I sat on a bank and looked down hill, where went a carter. And I looked up hill, where lay something which might be nothing or not his. Now, shall I make a fool of myself by pursuing to tell him he may have dropped something or shall I go on and see? So I went on and saw a coat with a fat pocket, and by then he was out of sight, and perhaps it wasn't his, and it was very hot and the hill steep. So I minded my own business, making Cain's motto mine, and now feel so bad, being quite sure that it was his. And I wonder how many miles he will have tramped back looking for it and whether his dinner was in the pocket.

These unintentional misdoings are the "sins" one repents of all one's life long. I have others stored away, the bitterest of small things done or undone in haste and repented of at so much leisure afterward and always done to people or things I had no grudge against, sometimes even a love for. They are my skeletons. I will tell you of them some day.

This, dearest, is our first enforced absence from each other, and I feel it almost more hard on me than on you. Beloved, let us lay our hearts together and get comforted. It is not real separation to know that another part of the world contains the rest of me. Oh, the rest of me, the rest of me that you are! So, thinking of you, I can never be tired. I rest yours.

LETTER XX.

Yes, dearest, "patience!" But it is a virtue I have little enough of naturally and used to be taught to pray for as a child. And I remember once really hurting dear mother-aunt's feelings by trying to repay her for that teaching by a little iniquitous laughter at her expense. It was too funny for me to feel very contrite about, as I do sometimes over quite small things, or I would not be telling it you now (for there are things in me I would conceal even from you). I dare say you would not guess it, but the M. A. is a most long person over her private devotions. Perhaps it was her own habit, with the cares of a household sometimes conflicting, which made her recite to me so often her pet legend of a saintly person who, constantly interrupted over her prayers by mundane matters, became a pattern in patience out of these snippings of her godly desires. So, one day, angels in the disguise of cross people with selfish demands on her time came seeking to know where in her composition or composure exasperation began, and, finding none, they let her return in peace to her missal, where for a reward all the letters had been turned into gold. "And that, my dear, comes of patience," my aunt would say, till I grew a little tired of the saying. I don't know what experience my uncle had gathered of her patience under like circumstances, but I notice that to this day he treads delicately, like Agag, when he knows her to be on her knees and prefers then to send me on his errands instead of doing them himself.

So it happened one day that he wanted a particular coat which had been put away in her clothes closet, and she was on her knees between him and it, with the time of her amen quite indefinite. I was sent, said my errand briefly and was permitted to fumble out her keys from her pocket while she continued to kneel over her morning psalms.

What I brought to him turned out to be the wrong coat. I went back and knocked for readmittance. Long sufferingly she bade me to come in. I explained, and still she repressed herself, only saying in a tone of affliction, "Do see this time that you take the right one!"

After I had made my second selection and proved it right on my uncle's person the parallelism of things struck me, and I skipped back to my aunt's door and tapped. I got a low wailing "Yes" for answer, a monosyllabic substitute for the "How long, O Lord?" of a saint in difficulties. When I called through the keyhole, "Are your psalms written in gold?" she became really angry, I suppose because the miracle so well earned had not come to pass.

Well, dearest, if you have been patient with me over so much about nothing I pray this letter may appear to you written in gold. Why I write so is partly that it is bad for us both to be down in the mouth or with hearts down at heel, and so, since you cannot, I have to do the dancing, and partly because I found I had a bad temper on me which needed curing and being brought to the sun go down point of owing no man anything, which, sooner said, has finally been done, and I am very meek now and loving to you and everything belonging to you, not to come nearer the sore point.

And I hope some day, some day, as a reward to my present submission, that you will sprain your ankle in my company (just a very little bit for an excuse) and let me have the nursing of it! It hurts my heart to have your poor bones crying out for comfort that I am not to bring to them. I feel robbed of a part of my domestic training and may never pick up what I have just lost. And I fear greatly you must have been truly in pain to have put off Meredith for a day. If I had been at hand to read to you, I flatter myself you would have liked him well and been soothed. You must take the will, beloved, for the deed. I kiss you now, as much as even you can demand. And when you get this I will be thinking of you all over again. When do I ever leave off? Love, love, love, till our next meeting, and then more love still and more! Ever your own.

LETTER XXI.

Dearest—I am in a simple mood today and give you the benefit of it. I shall become complicated again presently, and you will hear from me directly that happens.

The house only emptied itself this morning. I may say emptied, for the remainder fits like a saint into her niche and is far too comfortable to count. This is C., whom you only once met, when she sat so much in the background that you will not remember her. She has one weakness, a thirst between meals—the blameless thirst of a rabid teetotaler. She hides cups of cold tea about the place as a dog its bones. Now and then one gets spilled or sat on, and when she hears of the accident she looks thirsty, with a thirst which only that particular cup of tea could have quenched. In no other way is she any trouble. Indeed, she is a great dear and has the face of a madonna, as beautiful as an apocryphal gospel to look at and "make believe" in.

Arthur, too, like the rest of them, when he came over to give me his brotherly blessing, wished to know what you were like. I didn't pretend to remember your outward appearance too well; told him you looked like a common or garden Englishman and roused his suspicions by so careless a championship of my choice. He accused me of being in reality highly sentimental about you and with having at that moment your portrait concealed and strung round my neck in a locket. Mother-aunt stood up for me against him, declaring I was "too sensible a girl for nonsense of that sort." It is a little weakness of hers, you know, to resent extremes of endearment toward any one but herself in those she has "brooded," and she has thought us hitherto most restrained and proper, as indeed have we not been? Arthur and I exchanged tokens of truce. In a little while off went my aunt to bed, leaving us alone. Then, for he is the one of us that I am most frank with, "Arthur," cried I, and up came your little locket like a bucket from a well for him to have his first sight of you, my beloved. He objected that he could not see faces in a nutshell, and I suppose others cannot, only I.

He, too, is gone. If you had been coming, he would have spared another day, for today was planned and dated, you will remember, and we would have ridden half way to meet you. But as fate has tripped you and made all comings on your part indefinite he sends you his hopes for a later meeting.

How is your poor foot? I suppose as it is ill I may send it a kiss by post and wish it well. I do. Truly you are to let me know if it gives you much pain, and I will lie awake thinking of you. This is not sentimental, for if one knows that a friend is occupied over one's sleeplessness one feels the comfort.

I am perplexed how else to give you my company. Your mother, I know, could not yet truly welcome me, and I wish to be as patient as possible and not push for favors that are not offered. So I cannot come and ask to take you out in her carriage nor come and carry you away in mine. We must try how fast we can hold hands at a distance.

I have kept up to where you have been reading in "Richard Feverel," though it has been a scramble, for I have less opportunity of reading, I with my feet, than you, without yours. In your book I have just got to the smuggling away of General Monk in the perforated coffin, and my sense of history capitulates in an abandonment of laughter. I yield. The Caul's invasion of Britain always becomes broad farce when he attempts it. This in clever ludicrousness beats the unintentional comedy of Victor Hugo's "John-Jim-Jack" as a name typical of Anglo-Saxon christenings. But Dumas, through a dozen absurdities, knows apparently how to stalk his quarry. So large a genius may play the fool and remain wise.

You see, I have given your author a warm welcome at last. And what about you and mine? Tell me you love his women, and I will not be jealous. Indeed, outside him I don't know where to find a written English woman of modern times whom I would care to meet or could feel honestly bound to look up to. Nowhere will I have her shaking her ringlets at me in Dickens or Thackeray. Scott is simply not modern, and Hardy's women, if they have nobility in them, get so cruelly broken on the wheel that you get but the wrecks of them at last. It is only his charming baggages who come to a good ending.

I like an author who has the courage and self restraint to leave his noble creations alive. Too many try to ennoble them by death. For my part, if I have to go out of life before you, I would gladly trust you to the hands of Clara or Rose or Janet or, most of all, Vittoria, though, to be accurate, I fear they have all grown too old for you by now.

And you? Have you any men to offer me in turn out of your literary admirations, supposing you should die of a snapped ankle? Would you give me to D'Artagnan, for instance? Hardly, I suspect. But either choose me some proxy hero or get well and come to me. You will be very welcome when you do. Sleep is making sandy eyes at me. Good night, dearest.

LETTER XXII.

Why, my beloved, since you put it to me as a point of conscience—it is only lying on your back, with one active leg doing nothing and the other dying to have done aching, which has made you take this new start of inquiring within upon everything—since you call on me for a conscientious answer, I say that it stands to reason that I love you more than you love me, because there is so much more of you to love, let alone fit for loving.

Do you imagine that you are going to be a cripple for life and therefore an indifferent dancer in the dances I shall always be leading you that you have started this fit of self depreciation? Or is it because I have thrown Meredith at your sick head that you doubt my tact and my affection and my power patiently to bear for your sake a good deal of cold shoulder? Dearest, remember I am doctoring you from a distance and am not allowed to come and see my patient, so can only judge from your letters how ill you are. That you have been concealing from me almost treacherously, and only by a piece of abject waylaying did I receive word today of your sleepless nights and so get the key to your symptoms. Lay by Meredith, then, for awhile. I am sending you a cargo of Stevenson instead. You have been truly unkind, trying to read what required effort when you were fit for nothing of the sort.

And lest even Stevenson should be too much for you and wanting very much, and perhaps a little bit jealously, to be your most successful nurse, I am letting my last large share of shyness of you go, and with a pleasant sort of pain, because I know I have hit on a thing that will please you; I open my hands and let you have these, and with them goes my last blush. Henceforth I am a woman without a secret, and all your interest in me may evaporate. Yet I know well it will not.

As for this resurrection pie from love's dead letter office, you will find from it at least one thing—how much I depended upon response from you before I could become at all articulate. It is you, dearest, from the beginning who have set my head and heart free and made me a woman. I am something quite different from the sort of child I was less than a year ago when I wrote that small prayer which stands sponsor for all that follows. How abundantly it has been answered, dearest beloved, only I know. You do not!

Now my prayer is not that you should "come true," but that you should get well. Do this one little thing for me, dearest! For you I will do anything. My happiness waits for that. As yet I seem to have done nothing. Oh, but, beloved, I will! From a reading of the Fioretti, I sign myself as I feel—your glorious poor little one.

THE CASKET LETTERS.

A.

My Dear Prince Wonderful — Pray God bless —— and make him come true for my sake. Amen. R. S. V. P.

B.

Dear Prince Wonderful—Now that I have met you I pray that you will be my friend. I want just a little of your friendship, but that so much, so much! And even for that little I do not know how to ask.

Always to be your friend. Of that you shall be quite sure.

C.

Dear Prince Wonderful—Long ago, when I was still a child, I told myself of you, but thought of you only as in a fairy tale. Now I am afraid of trusting my eyes or my ears for fear I should think too much of you before I know you really to be true. Do not make me wish so much to be your friend unless you are also going to be true!

Please come true now, for mine and all the world's sake, but for mine especially, because I thought of you first. And if you are not able to come true, don't make me see you any more. I shall always remember you and be glad that I have seen you just once.

D.

Dear Prince Wonderful—Has God blessed you yet and made you come true? I have not seen you again, so how am I to know? Not that it is necessary for me to know even if you do come true. I believe already that you are true.

If I were never to see you again, I should be glad to think of you as living and shall always be your friend. I pray that you may come to know that.

E.

Dear Highness—I do not know what to write to you. I only know how much I must write. I have always written the things I thought about. It has been easy to find words for them. Now I think about you, but have no words—no words, dear highness, for you! I could write at once if I knew you were my friend. Come true for me. I will have so much to tell you then!

F.

Dear Highness—If I believe in fairy tales coming true, it is because I am superstitious. This is what I did today. I shut my eyes and took a book from the shelf, opened it and put my fingers down on a page. This is what I came to:

All I believed is true!
I am able yet
All I want to get
By a method as strange as new.
Dare I trust the same to you?

Fate says, then, you are to be my friend. Fate has said I am yours already. That is very certain. Only in real life, where things come true, would a book have opened as this has done.

G.

Dear Highness—I am sure now, then, that I please you and that you like me perhaps only a little, for you turned out of your way to ride with me, though you were going somewhere so fast. How much I wished it when I saw you coming, but dared not believe it would come true!

"Come true." It is the word I have always been writing and everything has, you most of all. You are more true each time I see you; so true that now I will write it down at last, the truth for you, who have come so true.

Dear highness and great heart, I love you dearly, though you don't know it, quite ever so much, and am going to love you ever so much more; only please like me a little better first. You on your dear side must do something, or, before I know, I may be wringing my hands all alone on a desert island to a bare blue horizon, with nothing in it real or fabulous.

If I am to love you, nothing but happiness is to be allowed to come of it. So don't come true too fast without one little wee corresponding wish for me to find that you are. I am quite happy thinking you out slowly. It takes me all day long; the longer the better.

I wonder how often in my life I shall write down that I love you, having once written it (I do; I love you! There [it] is for you, with more to follow after!), and send you my love as I do now into the great emptiness of chance, hoping somehow, known or unknown, it may bless you and bring good to you.

Oh, but 'tis a windy world and I a mere feather in it! How can I get blown the way I would?

Still I have a superstition that some star is over me which I have not seen yet, but shall, heaven helping me.

And now good night, and no more, no more at all. I send out an "I love you" to be my celestial commercial traveler for me while I fold myself up and become its sleeping partner.

Good night. You are the best and truest that I ever dreamed yet.

SORES AND ULCERS.

Sores and Ulcers never become chronic unless the blood is in poor condition—is sluggish, weak and unable to throw off the poisons that accumulate in it. The system must be relieved of the unhealthy matter through the pores, and great danger to life would follow should it heal before [illegible] and all impurities eliminated from the system. S.S.S. begins the cure by first cleansing and invigorating the blood, building up the general health and removing from the system all morbid, effete matter. When this has been accomplished the discharge gradually ceases, and the sore or ulcer heals. It is the tendency of these old indolent sores to grow worse and worse, and eventually to destroy the bones. Local applications, while soothing and to some extent alleviate pain, cannot reach the seat of the trouble. S. S. S. does, and no matter how apparently hopeless your condition, even though your constitution has broken down, it will bring relief when nothing else can. It supplies the rich, pure blood necessary to heal the sore and nourish the debilitated, diseased body.

A CONSTANT DRAIN UPON THE SYSTEM.

Mr. J. B. Talbert, Lock Box 245, Winona, Miss., says: "Six years ago my leg from the knee to the foot was one solid sore. Several physicians treated me and I made two trips to Hot Springs, but found no relief. I was induced to try S. S. S., and it made a complete cure. I have been a perfectly well man ever since."

SSS is the only purely vegetable blood purifier known—contains no poisonous minerals to ruin the digestion and add to, rather than relieve your sufferings. If your flesh does not heal readily when scratched, bruised or cut, your blood is in bad condition, and any ordinary sore is apt to become chronic.

Send for our free book and write our physicians about your case. We make no charge for this service.
